But however pleasing the war may be to Japanese vanity and thirst for military glory, it is time they began to realise that for-guers are viewing with very decided feelings the damage which the war has already inflicted apon trade, and are saking how far the injury is to be allowed to continue unchecked. The time for the opening of the Northern Ports is drawing near, but business promises to be absolutely mil. for, with the reiterated intention of the Japanese to occupy Peking, such a state is but natural. ## REPRESENTATION IN HONGKONG

.The N. C. Daily News says :- In its criticism of our recent editorial comments on the reception the Public Health Bill met with in Council, our Hongkong contemporary, the Daily Press, is not -disposed to take exception to our main contentions. But it demurs to the norollary. What ! Representation a sham! Honrkong better without it : " Flat burglary as ever was committed." And this, ton, from the Model Settlement whose repre entative system likat once the quey and the despair of less invoored and more governed neighbours!

Well, we are sorry to hart anybody's feelings, but surely the bearing of our remarks lies in the application of them. It is a false analogy which would compare two hodies so different both in principle and detail as the Hongkong Legislative Conneil and the Shanghai Municipality. Different in principle, because, to take our instance out of many, the one is legislative in its fanctions and the other is not. Different in detail, because, while in Hongkong the executive exercises judicial powers over the natives, the same powers are in Shanghai vested in the Chiness authorities them elves. The Shanghai Municipal Council is a local committee with powers to lavy certain taxes on the community and expend them for the common weal and upon the whole their modest powers have been used with a ture which the Hongkong Council was intended to be. And it is just here that, in our opinion, it has lamentably failed and must by its very nature continue to fail: For what does representation mean? On what is it to be based? On taxation. Well, taking taxation as a basis what do we find in Hongkong? According to the last census, taken in 1891, the total population amounted to 221,441, but of this number there were, exclusive of the military and the navy, only 795 British adults. Of these adults-795 out of 221.441 - mony are merely birds if passage and very few have any stake in the Colony. The amount of taxation they represent connot be large.
